Very possibly... Angel Theory is pure in it's electronics, including completely original dancefloor songs to slow moods, dark melodies and echt depth of character. There's no wings, clouds or anything so ready-made as flop Charles Fenech notes, the name is about the contradictions and his music creates this picture with searing personal emotions across an almost plastic genre. fatal condition is electronic purity: original dancefloor songs and slow moods, dark melodies and echt depth of character. as noted by australian flop charles fenech, ANGELTHEORY refers not to wings, to clouds or to clichs it's about contradictions and extremes. black or white, up versus down, love with hate, loss and gain - ANGELTHEORY sears personal emotions across the otherwise plastic genre. fatal condition is bereft of boring electro-clichs. the mechanical loops confront the emotional vocals as you are transported to a new world full of dancing, melancholy drifting through the sound of forever. ANGELTHEORY appeals to a wide electronic community. fans of covenant and haujobb won't want to miss ANGELTHEORY, while there are elements extending to nine inch nails, gridlock + vnv nation fans alike.
