Deep, dark and mysterious cinematic prog-rock symphony with an experimental twist and illusions of grandeur. 7 MP3 Songs ELECTRONIC: Soundscapes, ELECTRONIC: Ambient Details: Bobby BeauSoleil has created most of his musical recordings while behind bars. Yet regardless of his circumstances, or perhaps in spite of them, if not because of them, he has remained true to his musical vision and his passion, producing some of the most memorable deep symphonic psychedelia ever recorded. At the age of 17, possessed of some callow ability as a blues-oriented lead guitarist, BeauSoleil first founded then confederated himself into a quintet that became San Franciscos seminal electric chamber group, The Orkustra (1966), thus distinguishing himself as an instrumentalist with a unique musical vision. His subsequent recorded experiments in primal psychedelic free jazz-rock with The Magick Powerhouse of Oz (1967), and later with his prison band The Freedom Orkurstra (1975-79), became the foundation of his compositions for the soundtrack of Kenneth Angers epic underground film, Lucifer Rising. Imbued with BeauSoleils signature electronic guitar stylings and home-brew synthesizer textures, this ground-breaking recording has received worldwide acclaim for its power to evoke moods that are by turns dark and brooding, playful and exuberant. The improbable odyssey continues in BeauSoleils more recent albums. Recorded in the 90s and early 00s, Running With the White Wolf, Mantra, Orb, Dreamways of the Mystic, and 7 offer a series of rich soundscapes that amply display the artists ongoing ability to escort the listener in wild flights of fancy to magickal realms with original music that cuts across eras and genres.
