And yet he wanted more... In the summer and fall of 2004, the Boulder-based alternative/pop group Acoustic Radio established itself as one of the most prominent new bands in the Boulder/Denver area. Front man Andy Hackbarth, 23, has been called "...a modern-day Jim Croce", coupling 16 years of classical guitar training (for which he has been nationally recognized) with pensive, instinctual vocals. Acoustic Radio is constantly performing in Colorado, often showcasing the newest tune they've added to a slew of radio-friendly, hook-driven, original songs. Between Hackbarth, bassist Russell Michaels, drummer Alan Ward and lead guitarist Carey Harwood, the group brings over 50 years of combined performance experience to the stage - striving to make every show better than the last! This fall the quartet took some time off to complete their first full-length album, Staring at the Ceiling (released in mid-December), a 12-track collection of mellow but upbeat songs recorded at Coupe Studios (Rose Hill Drive, Dotsero) in Boulder, CO with producer John McVey.
