Details: Finally, "Invisible Man" has emerged out of the shadows. That's me on the cover, ready to begin this phase of being out there, visible--to be seen as well as heard. This collection of sounds attempts to convey the sorrow Ive experienced during a period in which I lost the closest person to me on earth, but then within a matter of months, witnessed proudly and joyfully, the emergence of a new world leader. 1. Hail To The Chief (B. Turnbull, V. Jarvis): a tribute to the amazing changes taking place in America and to a courageously inspired man and his family. 3:21 2. Begin The Beguine (Cole Porter/Warner Bros. Inc.): a whole new phase of life begins now for me personally and as a citizen of the world. 4:22 3. Goat Bite De Pig: a song from a musical play written for The Bronx Renaissance Community Theater. The song title is a West Indian expression--something folks might say and laugh about as they play a slamming game of Dominoes while musing about politics. 4:08 4. Til There Was You (Meredith Wilson/Frank Corp.): The ultimate love song. I certainly cant discount the love and comfort of Radiance in my life. 3:21 5. Lifeforce: a celebration of earth and its unspeakable, utter beauty in the Here and Now. 5:38 6. Soulstice: My life and soul have changed dramatically since the last winter solstice. 3:58 7. Afterlife: is a departure from tonally-centered music. This enables me to musically imagine and describe what it might be like to pass from a world of familiarity to a completely strange and foreign one. 8:23 8. Welcome Home Love: or Welcome Home, Love. 5:12 9. Jesus Loves Me was written by Anna B. Warner, David Rutherford McGuire and William B. Bradbury during the 1860's for a person who was about to pass into infinity, so I wont worry too much. Ill try to be happy and keep making music until they finally listen, Mom. 3:04 10. Dont Worry, Be Happy (Bobby Mcferrin/Prob Noblem Music*) 3:27
