Now its Over is a lovely hybrid of atmospheric electro synth using classical sounds to complete the album. 10 MP3 Songs in this album (38:36) ! Related styles: ELECTRONIC: Virtual Orchestra, ELECTRONIC: Folktronic People who are interested in Hybrid Calvin Harris should consider this download. Details: In 2008 a young musician called Adam Goldsack was signed to Garden State Records, writing and recording tracks for Garden State including a charity album. In early 2009 he started working on the album 'Now its Over'. An album he wrote based around death and dying of loved ones. The album was of personal importance to the artist and encapsulates the feelings of grief. The lyrics in the songs 'The world goes by' and 'Six feet under' are the artists personal favourites. The song how to lie is the darkest on the album, trying to convey the ways people teach themselves to lie to themselves about death. 'Music Box' is a classically influenced song about childhood and the sounds of innocence. 'Classical Disco' is a hybrid classical/electro track changing discourse throughout. Moving from disco to classical. 'Girl with the violin' is another favourite of the artist as this is the first track in which he has managed to express different array of emotions, in a weird way. The title 'Girl with a Violin' is taken from a picasso painting with a mandolin instead of a violin. The track 'Little Nao' was initially going to be called 'hate' as this is again an emotion of death and loss. The track is very robotic electronic. The album is best described as a beautiful hybrid of Classical Electro Synth. For the first time adam uses vocals on an album and conveys his message throughout. In short, a gorgeous must have debut album.
