Two piano improvisations created by Boston-based pianist/composers Ben Schwendener and Marc Rossi which realize a unique and empathic musical language based on George Russell's Lydian Chromatic Concept of Tonal Organization. 22 MP3 Songs JAZZ: Free Jazz, JAZZ: World Fusion Details: Over the course of their 10-year partnership, Boston-based pianist/composers Ben Schwendener and Marc Rossi have developed a unique and empathic musical language based on George Russell's Lydian Chromatic Concept of Tonal Organization. They first documented this language-which uses innovative graphic scores as a coherent framework for spontaneous, genre-defying improvisation-on their 2002 debut, Living Geometry (Gravity Records 1900-6), which All About Jazz reviewer Glenn Astarita called "a very special endeavor" and a top pick for 2002. This new two-disc set documents a pair of 2003 Boston performances, including four pieces also featuring guests Uwe Steinmetz and the legendary Joe Maneri on reeds. Ben Schwendener piano/composer Marc Rossi piano/composer Joe Maneri clarinet and saxophones (Disc 2: 7-10) Uwe Steinmetz saxophones (Disc 2: 7-10) "The rhythmic energy provokes the pair into some spirited interchanges, and helps to give the music a content beyond the mere realization of a theory."-Stuart Kremsky, Cadence Available from: WWW.GRAVITYARTS.ORG North Country Distributors (315-287-2852) Discerning outlets everywhere cdbaby.com For more information visit gravityarts.org Publicity and media agent: Scott Menhinick, Improvised Communications (617) 489-6561 scott@improvisedcommunications.com
