Details: Brooke began writing music at the age of 8 in response to the hot six grader living next door to her suburban home in Saint Louis, Missouri. Shortly thereafter, he moved, and the following years were spent focusing on dance, jazz, and theatre. Cut to the turn of the millennium. She picked up music again playing bass, harmonizing, and (pole) dancing as part of two prominent San Francisco bands, performing at such events as the Exotic Erotic Ball at Cow Palace. While based in Hollywood, Brooke toured the SW and NW as a solo artist, playing festivals such as ROCKRGRL and BAM, and returning to local venues like The Mint with her trio. Brooke can silence a room when she opens her mouth and stir it back up again with her poignant lyrics, tongue-in-cheek attitude, and her own personal blend of good-nature and sass. Crowd favorites include that first song ever written about the boy next door, as well as the songs about her imperfections and the difficulty of trying to get a date for Passoverwhen youre not Jewish. Off-stage, Brooke has performed her tunes on both KCSNs Tied to the Tracks with Larry Wines and in the recently released and critically acclaimed indie feature I'm Through With White Girls. She can also be found sharing her theatrical flair and love for standards in local jazz bars when she takes advantage of her guitar-less hands by crooning out the classics and coercing a patron or two into doing a little two-step.
