Stay tuned. Embrionic melds the other-worldly atmospheres of electronica and dance music with the raw energy and power of rock. Floating above it all, with a voice to live for, sultry Irish siren Siobhan McAuley weaves hauntingly beautiful European and Middle-Eastern melodies around the organic rhythms and textures of producer/composer James Bryan. The brainchild of Siobhan and James, Embrionic draws from their critically acclaimed local and national successes to create a sound that is altogether uplifting and unique. From ambient to alternative, trance to trip-hop, Embrionic blends cross-cultural genres into a myriad of beautiful songs that are sure to transcend the boundaries of modern music. REVIEWS Siobhan has been featured in Boston Globe Magazine, and the Boston Phoenix and the Boston Globe named Siobhan "best unsigned" and "overlooked" artist. Early demos released worldwide on the internet have generated a substantial buzz, with track "Dream" featured as "Song of the Day" on Garageband and track "All the Children" appearing as a "spotlight" track on IUMA.com. Embrionic was recently featured on the indiehits bandpromoteindustry music sampler. Fans and critics have described Embrionic as "Patti Smith meets Pink Floyd" and "Siouxsie Sioux meets U2" while drawing comparisons to diverse musical influences ranging from Portishead to Evanescence and the Eurhythmics.
