ROCK: Jam-band, ROCK: Roots Rock Details: Welcome to the music scene of today. A cluttered landscape of performers embodying everything we don't need. Where music sheds its most precious qualities only to parallel those of lesser importance. Where music, becoming more material and less meaningful, quickly loses its value and significance. Now, welcome to their music scene. Music as a form of art and expression, it should not be disposable, rather universal and eternal. Like a good story, music can captivate a willing subject. It can enrich, enlighten and support them. Good music can be identified with, forever. They create for a purpose far from that of fellow musicians. Not to catch your eye or fill their pockets, but to please your ear and evoke your emotions. Their sound: classic; unrefined and honest. No gimmicks or falsities; it's real. It can hardly be captured on tape, let alone bettered by it. It's best seen and heard live, your senses won't know what hit them. They are The Johnson Brothers Band. Paul Lundblad, Bob Johnson and Jake Johnson. Three Steel-Town teenagers with uncommon determination and talent. They have something special and want you to see it, hear it and be moved by it. They have something to say; a point to get across. It's traveled against the grain of conventions and popularity. It's been a long time coming, but it's here. Rock n' Roll, as it should be: raw, powerful and exciting. From people who never cared about the latest fad or the biggest trend, who listened to what they liked, what rocked, what moved them. They studied it, loved it, lived it and created it. They're rock and roll boys, big dreams and big sounds, and they're coming for you.
