Ambient grooves and explorations 11 MP3 Songs ELECTRONIC: Ambient, ELECTRONIC: Down Tempo
Details: This is an album that is very hard to pigeonhole but it is one of the best 'contemporary' sounding albums I have heard all year." David Law "Please forgive me if I sound like a broken record as I rave about yet another strong release from the Databloem label. This time kudos goes to label founder Dennis Knopper (Spielerei) and Jeroen Vermeent (Mantacoup). Separately they have had some solid releases; together they are phenomenal. The first seven tracks are The Wichman Concert, and Part 1 is exceptional. Try to imagine a cross between 1970s Tangerine Dream and current day Biosphere. The pulsating quality is like Ricochet or Encore, but there is a chill factor as well, firmly rooted in modern ambient electronica. The combination is intoxicating. After a subdued Part 2, the elixir continues in Part 3, as shades of Risky Business blend with Substrata. The result is fresh and exciting. A funky bass line dances along in Part 4, a cool unexpected twist. Part 5 is fully contemporary electronics, with punchy bass that will give your subwoofer a workout. Part 6 is a bubbly steaming brew of ambient sounds. Part 7 is a fitting conclusion, the best of the bunch, with a thoroughly infectious rhythm and great sequencing. This is followed by the quietest and most abstract piece, Followind. Sfunato shucks and jives and shuffles from one cool backbeat and synth sound to another. Dens fires a slow steady pulse as fluty synths and other bright sounds float alongside. Running out of eiszeit is a slightly quirky but satisfying close to a great CD.
