Some of his favorites examples of great songwriting are holiday songs like Mel Tormes The Christmas Song and the melancholy hymn O Come, O Come Emmanuel. Over the past 3 years, Schicker has been collecting a set of original holiday songs with no plan for release. During a break from the tour, Josh finished demos of these songs which are now found on this EP. While touring with AG Silver on their Clean Water for Africa Tour, Josh found himself playing a song he wrote in Portland about giving. The basic idea is that the small changes we make in our world can make a big difference. In life, a small amount of grace leads to a great amount of peace. What seems insignificant from one point of view can turn into something very special. In that same spirit these songs emerge under the title Grace then Peace. Now, there are a few stories to tell... While living in New York, Josh found himself wandering the streets of Manhattan with a camera case in one hand and a steno notebook in the other. The result is a few hours of random holiday video, some stills of various things that caught his eye and a few of the songs included on this EP. The most important piece that came of these creative walks is the picture that sits next to this paragraph. The word peace is from an Abraham Lincoln quote on a building near Grand Central Station and the word grace is from the Grace Building that sits on Bryant Park. The two images form a word-pairing that became ingrained in Schickers mind. A year later, the EP is released in that same idea The first Christmas recording from Josh Schicker. Featuring 6 songs, this humble holiday offering is the perfect compliment to the over-played holiday songs we know all too well.
