This talented guitarist/singer/songwriter was born and raised in the beautiful Hawaiian Islands. Born on Maui in 1949, he was a teenager during the flower-power rock-n-roll 60s era. Picking up the guitar at age 14, he was immersed in the British American blues movement and the now dubbed oldies rock of that era and all that went along with that time in history. After finding some peace in his life and starting a family, Michael and his former wife started recording with gospel label BG Records out of LA. Starting in 1974, they explored a life on the road with their 3 young sons, sharing their music in churches all across the U.S. They released 3 albums in 74, 77 80 with two songs rising to the top of gospel radio in Tennessee and Washington. In 1980, after 6 years on the road, he returned home- back to the green mountains and crystal blue waters of Maui. He continued to write and perform with local favorites like Bla Pahinui and Jesse Nakooka. Two years later, leaving Maui to go to Oahu was yet another move he made to continue making music his life. As time went on, he knew he had to get a day job to support his family but never gave up his passion for writing and performing his music. He returned to CA in 1984 to the sleepy coastal town of Ventura where he spent the next 19 years. After getting married to his new wife Colleen in 1994, he formed a band called Maui

Blues with his good friend Ralph Mathis (yes, were dropping names here--Johnny Mathis brother) and returned to his love of blues and rock-- performing nights (after his "day job") and weekend gigs at local venues. All this time, his desire to return to the islands only grew stronger and in 2003, he and his wife returned to Oahu. He never stopped writing new material and now the time had come to share it with whoever would listen. Two years later, he got serious and recorded 12 songs and released his debut album Maui To Miller Street in the first part of 2007.
