The music of Robert Schroeder is various, but always soulful. He combines spherical Synthesizer sounds with modern rhythmical contrasts, often supplemented by spacey guitars and sometimes also by piano, cello or voices. Schroeder's music spectrum includes Electronic, Ambient, Chill-Out, Lounge, Berlin School, Adventure and Trip-Hop. Electronic Music in the widest sense is the musical style of this artist who has his roots in the music of Klaus Schulze, Can and Pink Floyd. With brainCHIPS (14th solo album, 74 minutes) the artist has produced a special kind of Electronic Music by adding some experimental and exotic singing atmospheres. The Moroccan Rahal Brimil was inspired here by Schroeder's new compositions - and Robert Schroeder by the unusual voice and the unconventional style of the singer.
