If you put The Beatles, Jellyfish, Queen, Cheap Trick, and Counting Crows in a blender, this CD still wouldn't sound anything like what you'd end up with. Even so, it's an orgasm for your ears, and the reason your CD player has a "Repeat All" button. 15 MP3 Songs POP: Beatles-pop, POP: Power Pop

Details: It's happened a million times, but not until it happens to you do you fully understand what everyone else is talking about. You have a bad break up, you swear off relationships forever, and just as you're about to check into the nunnery (or monastery), you find that killer someone...the one who makes you laugh out loud, the one who you swear knows your thoughts (even before you think them), and the one you want to study carefully so you just don't miss any of the qualities that make that person so intensely special to you. If this sounds familiar, then "A Legend In Our Spare Time", by Sensory Lullaby, is the musical equivalent of the above experience. This album is full of everything you've been looking for, and didn't even know you were looking for it. It has all those old familiar feelings, yet is the brand new thing that gets you excited...as if this were the first album you ever fell in love with. Sure, you'll try to play hard to get, but you just won't be able to tear your ears away. It's just like that game you played on the phone where neither one of you could hang up on the other, so you end up talking for another three hours. Yes...this album is that intense a listening experience. It's so exhilarating, so engulfing, so consuming, and so intimate that you would swear you've had this album all your life...but then you remember you just met this album yesterday. It just feels so natural, as if it's been playing in the background all your life...
