Details: Yellow Room are brother and sisters Alan, Ruth and Niamh who have been writing, recording and gigging together since late 2000. Despite all having demanding day jobs, their shared love of writing and performing has kept them indulging in their music over the years. Niamh and Ruth started out singing at weddings and funerals and also performing in local amateur productions but then moved on to writing their own songs which they performed at a number of small Dublin venues. Alan had been in a few rock bands actively gigging around the country. He and Ruth had worked together on some projects while studying at the Rock College, and when Alans band broke up in 2000, the girls saw the opportunity to poach him, and another founder member of the band, Ray, and combine their talents. Yellow Room was born. Many months of writing and fine tuning followed until they had a good range of material ready to perform and, through regular acoustic gigs in various pubs around Dublin, the band found their sound. During the summer of 2001, Yellow Room spent some time in the studio recording a collection of songs with a full band. The resulting demo, Outside was launched to a full house in Whelans, Wexford Street and a good number of CDs were sold on the night. Yellow Room continued to gig around the country headlining, supporting and also continuing to try out new material as the opportunity arose. They also had fun trying out different line ups from acoustic to full band. They continued in this manner until 2007, pausing only for a couple of weddings, a new baby, and unfortunately Rays departure from the band. At this point, they took a break from gigging to concentrate on putting material together for an album. This album called, simply, Yellow Room was recorded in their own make shift studio in Alans home and has tried to capture the mainly acoustic, mellow sound that has become their trademark. In late

2008, when recording was complete and the finishing touches where being put to the CD, Yellow Room resumed gigging. They can currently be seen in venues around Dublin but the intention is to take the set around the country soon. See yellowroom.ie for details
