It all began in those early years when he noticed an old upright piano that sat in his grandmothers living room. One day he witnessed his two aunts playing the piano and they made things seem so simple. He says, And thats when I fell in love with the music. It was during this time period I taught myself to play basic cords, listen to the radio and play and sing along with every song I could. D wrote his first song at the age of nine and titled it She Is New, for a new classmate. It was the first time he wrote a song about a girl and sang it to her in the back of the classroom. Rooted in the richness of the southern church, he honed his talents and trained his voice, as best he could, to be as unique as possible.
