In a decadent empire of the far distant future, Gabriella is chosen to serve as a sexual companion for the king. However, Brie has no intentions of joining the Select Few. In fact, she has another mission, entirely...one that is destined to alter the future of the kingdom's poverty-stricken population. Michel also serves the king. It's his job to train Brie to suit the king's sexual preferences. Trouble is, Michel wants Brie for his own. Publisher's note: Although this book is set in the distant future, the setting and tone are more "historical" in nature. Mine is a re-release, previously published by Loose Id, LLC. Special Content Alert: Light D/s, graphic violence. She stared up at him a moment as the silence lengthened between them. Finally, she pulled her hands from his and stepped back. "Fine. I belong to the king. And you have a job to do." Michel studied her a moment, caught off guard by her quick change of heart. "Yes," he said, "I have a job to do, and your experiences with Monique may be just the place to start." He moved closer, purposely crowding her, gauging her reaction. "Tell me, Brie, did you and Monique do more than share a few girlish kisses?" She opened her mouth as if to answer, but then shook her head. She dropped her gaze, then whispered, "I can't tell you." "Look at me, Gabriella." Michel moved even closer, his heart pounding in his chest. When she did not immediately comply, he raised his voice. "I said, look at me." She raised her head, meeting his gaze, and Michel smiled. "That's better. Now tell me about you and Monique." He placed a hand on her breast. She flinched and started to move away. "Don't," he told her. "Don't move." "Michel, please. I -" "Did she touch you here?" He stroked her nipple, smiling when she sucked in her breath. She trembled beneath his touch, but did not move away. "Did you let her touch you, Gabriella?" "Yes." The word came out in a rush. "Yes, I let her touch me." He pinched her nipple, lightly. "You're a very bad girl, Gabriella. You know you're supposed to come to me untouched." "I'm sorry. I told you, I thought -" Again, he cut her off. "Yes. You thought I'd appreciate your newly acquired skills. Tell me, what else did you learn?" She shook her head. "Nothing. I swear it." Michel saw the distress in her face. He dropped his hand from her breast and stepped back. "I believe you." He turned away from her and crossed to the wet bar. Pouring himself another drink, he struggled to gain control of his emotions, his own needs at war with his duty to the king. A duty that, for now, he must continue to fulfill. Gabriella had managed to throw his whole world into a tailspin, with a few simple words. I'm anxious to begin service with you. He took a long drink, closing his eyes as the costly liquor burned its way down his throat. How many women had come through his door in the last ten years, eager to be trained? Dozens? A hundred? And all of them had one thing in common: their eagerness to learn their lessons well, so they could move into the king's service. Until Gabriella. Unwittingly, she had offered him the one thing he wanted. He closed his eyes, considering the possibilities.
