"Eric Milano has all the soul, excellence of voice, and potential of Ben Harper or Blind Melon's Shannon Hoon...With no regrets, I can dub him the best unsigned singer/songwriter I've heard."

Eric Milano's self-titled debut, released independently in 2004, marks his first solo effort. Formerly the lead singer of Ten Degree Lean, (New York City based pop-soul-blues rockers), the band called it quits when bandmate Chris Pickford was killed while saving lives as a fireman during the World Trade Center tragedy. Inspired by the memory of his charismatic and talented friend (always called "Super Chris" by his chums), Eric decided to go it alone in the studio. Taking on the vast majority of the performance, recording, mixing and songwriting, Eric became his own back up band and rocked his songs to life during the hot nights of the New York City summer. Comparisons to The Wallflowers, Ben Harper, John Mayer, Counting Crows, Matchbox 20 and Ryan Adams have all been thrown his way, but none truly describe his style. The record is a diverse collection of songs, no two sounding similar, yet all unmistakably branded with Eric's own sound; A sound that includes potent, emotive vocals, lyrics that flow from the soul, and music that'll grab your ear and hold on tight. Eric's music is now also available "a la carte" ($0.99 per song) at the iTunes Music store. Eric and his songs have commercial potential on the lines of John Mayer, Ben Harper, The Wallflowers etc..." "...I really like this haunting piece--I like its simplicity and honesty. feels like it should be in a movie..." [referring to 'Make It Right'] "...Dear Eric, You've got solid songs with a beautiful rich voice. 'Make it Right' really brings out the aching quality in your vocal and is a lovely song, with a beautiful verse melody and great instrumental arrangements..." "...While it isn't designed to pay off in a commercial sense, 'Anna' conveys a distinct artistic identity, and I think it points you in a viable direction..." "...Hey Eric- I love the Lovett/Isacc vibe on this stuff- you really have found your sound. The arrangements are simple and easy to listen to. Vocals are strong throughout..." "...Dear Eric, Your songs have a solid appeal with sophisticated melody lines and structures. 'Make It Right' is really a moving song both in melody and the simplicity of the production. 'Alone No More' has a great pop feel..." Eric and his band had the #1 song out of 11,000 songs in the rock category on garageband in March of 2003. Comments by various web surfers... If only more of this were on the radio, things would be better Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania Wow. Period. This track has both great originality and mood. The vocals were superior, and I am a very, very tough critic. Yet I have no criticism. Well done, gentlemen. Spanish Fork, Utah Better than Kravitz....mo blues! You're better than Lenny Kravitz. You play the blues for real. I dig it. New York, NY Got a lot of potential. What the hell are you doing here? Might want to shorten your song though.
