punchy punky guitar driven tunes 11 MP3 Songs ROCK: 60's Rock, ROCK: Punk Details: Bullit is the band formed from the remnants of the grunge-punk rock three piece - "Stuffed" from the mid nineties. Stuffed exploded after their short lived career with many admirers, delivering a 12 song demo album in two days. After the break up of Stuffed, founder members Ceall O'Dunlaing and Eddie Reynolds continued recording, on and off over the years. During that period Eddie was concentrating on other projects, including the "Judas Diary", "Cronin", and "The Celtic Ninja Construction". Around the start of 2003, the combination of Eddie's new studio and the desire to do something that would make a difference, Ceall and Eddie decided to start a new band, and record some of the backlog of songs recorded to that point. Towards September 2003, the album "Can't stop, Won't stop" was finished up, and included favourites from the Stuffed days, songs written over the years, through to songs that were written during the recording process. Due to other commitments and a continually changing line up, Bullit didn't gig much after the release of this album. Bullit went back into the studio over the Christmas of 2004 with an arsenal of new songs. The songs came together quickly, and nothing was scrapped or regarded as album fillers. Peter Kirby came into the fold as full time drummer at this point, and complimented the Bullit sound perfectly. The new album is to be called "Addicted to Life", with a summer 2005 release date. The band are currently in the studio, preparing to take to the road in Ireland and Europe as a four piece, having recruited Kevin Leech on bass so that Eddie could take over guitar duties.
