War, injustice, general decline of the nation, and all the rest of the crud these guys are throwing at us. 8 MP3 Songs FOLK: Political, ROCK: Americana Details: just another person who's all bent out of shape about it all and has picked up the megaphone with something to yell; just another citizen who's been tied up in knots and finally ripped off the gag with a cry of surprise and pain; just another farmer who's grown another toe over being kicked around some more by the powers that be; just another borrower nor a lender bee; just another freedom-loving, garlic chomping, wine tasting, metal grasshopper wearing, mustard and mayo amateur musician with a bone to pick, money to lose, and a weirdly familiar brand of old-world politeness that's sometimes hard to respond to; just another face on the midnight train to Lancaster; just another nail in the board of boredom; just another paranoid and uptight miser discovered free-loading in the lonely hold of our spaceship; just another honest mistake; just another mis-reading of the tea leaves; just another fly in the ointment on the wall; just another family hurtling towards financial ruin as the politicians stand aside grinning and nodding their heads as the children curse them; you understand. This record is somewhat like a basket of fresh and progressive organic produce that has appeared at your grocer but miraculously will never spoil or degenerate. You can take it home with you and make it part of the most important things that happen in your day. Whether you view these things as necessities for survival, or simply pleasurable, they are the activities you are centered on and revolve around: in other words the spindle(s) of your life - and that is where this record is designed to live. On your spindle. Perhaps you are thinking, but I don't have a spindle. I only have a tray or slot on which to place the cds; or even less than that, one of these pod things where the music is basically placed on a wire and then zips down some kind of stream into the pod. Is that where the activities are that you revolve around - some place with no spindle at all? Just an empty tray or some old wires? Is that the proper place to keep organic produce (even if it never spoils or degenerates, or at least so they promise)? It seems a pity. And it is a pity too that our lives have become so filled with itchy dust and obnoxious colors that people everywhere are heaving their televisions out the window and collapsing back into their homes with a sigh of relief. But if you are dismayed and even sickened by the recent developments - you know the ones I mean - as the artist so evidently has been, then you may enjoy this soulful, swinging, sardonic record.
