Science Fiction sound track music. Electronic, yet "old fashioned" with strings, brass, choral effects, lots of synth rhythms. 9 MP3 Songs ELECTRONIC: Virtual Orchestra, EASY LISTENING: Mature Details: THE MUSEUM PIECE A Science-Fiction Story of the Universe What lies beyond the known edge of the universe? No human knows. That's what this story, and the music of this story is all about. Robert (Bob) W. Kellogg is a 71-year old radio broadcast retiree who has been doing electronic music since 1978. THE MUSEUM PIECE was his original short story, written in 1962, but never published. Now the story is set to instrumental music in a "sound track" fashion. Track one is the narrated story, running 24 minutes over music. Tracks two through nine run 44 minutes. This music is "old fashioned", that is, you'll hear strings, brass, choral effects over contemporary synth rhythms. Most of it is up tempo. Some of it, though, reflects the solitude and vastness of outer space.
