Public Speaking Extraordinaire + Gift Forget everything you have been led to believe about public speaking. And forget what everyone else have told you, especially unhelpful opinions about yourself. If you have a strong desire to overcome stage fright, deliver high impact presentations that move your audience and convey your ideas more effectively, then keep reading. But if you want to stay in the comfort zone and continue walking in the shadows of other people, stay at the sidelines and watch your extrovert counterparts having the time of their life, I wont waste your time any further and I suggest you hit the BACK button. Still with me?.... GOOD! Believe it or not, I can feel your inner pain and turmoil right now. The fact that youre still on this page now is because you can probably identify yourself to any of these scenarios: * You are afraid to speak up * You are tired of being outshined by people who seem to have a better way with words than you, and you often fall short in getting a job or a promotion * You are in business that requires dealing with people - and thats just it. Youre really afraid of dealing with people face-to-face! * Your assignment or job requires you to speak to many people * Your opinions are not taken seriously because people around you find that youre timid or you just appear less important to them

* You dont enjoy yourself at parties often because you cant converse well and youre rarely the center of attention * You are in the sales line and youre afraid of coming across as a hard selling sales man The list can go on and on. I know you can identify with any one or more of these scenarios thats been playing before your eyes - over and over again - throughout your life. Up until now, that is.
