The album is a blend of dance, electronica and rock with strong influences from Prince, Janet Jackson, and Bjork. "Aderrick is an artist on a mission to reconcile the two disparate camps of rock and pop," Craig Tiede of Illinois Entertainer writes. Aderrick has been featured on several internet and Chicago Public access music programs and continues to perform at various venues, attracting more fans at each event. He does mostly original material, but strives to stay versatile and not limit himself as an artist. "I try to bring the live elements of my music to the stage, still keeping the performance edgy, strong and confident. That really makes it fun for me as well as my audience. I always look forward to performing and bringing that raw energy," Aderrick comments. Aderrick sees himself bridging the gap between the worlds of mainstream pop and mainstream rock. "Folks cross over from time to time, but seldom bring a gap between two different types of music audiences," he says. "I strive to be a house hold name. Even if I don't win an award I want to reach as many folks as I could, having them say his songs and performances are so cool and so refreshing from what's out there today. I want to inspire other artist like others have inspired me." This may sound like a lot of ambition, but there is merit in both his words and art. "Aderrick displays talent that is not something I can brush aside. His arrangements, and the instrumentation on the songs, are impressive. His lyrical content and vocal abilities are also commendable. In short, Aderrick is an incredible musician!" Mark Lush of MWB sums it all up. "Thirsty"
