Lloyd graduated from high school June 2000, later entering The U.S. Air Force in July. The armed forces matured as well as disciplined his mind, really giving him a different look at life. The street life he grew up from compared to his life as a soldier really made him appreciate everyday of his life. The introduction of becoming a musician came to him while in active duty for the Air Force. At this time Lloyd met a fellow comrade, who taught him how to write and rap over an instrumental beat. From then on Lloyd wrote every day for the next 2 years. His writing soon turned in to fully formatted songs, which then made him start working towards completing his first album (Life After Uncle Sam). Currently learning as much information about the entertainment business as he can. At American River College from Prof. Eric Chun. Lloyd has established his business license, and is trying to network his product to the best of his ability. Lloyd's influences have been people, such as the great Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Malcolm X., 2 Pac, his father and most of all the good Lord above. In conclusion Lloyd knows and understands success takes time, and that patience is a virtue. At only 25, he truly believes his first work then play.
