BLUES: Acoustic Blues,
CLASSICAL: New Age Details: On this, their second CD, Freudmann and Herschler offer a more nuanced and beautiful collection of classical, flamenco and bluesy original cello/guitar duets. In one era and out the other. Gideon Freudmann and Mark Herschler, collectively known as BROQUE, further push the limits and blur the boundaries between classical and contemporary music on their second release, Ghost in the Attic. This stunning collection of spirited original compositions seamlessly blends with flamenco and classical pieces by Bach, Segarís and Tarrega. The guitar and cello magnificently complement one another. Both musicians are seasoned improvisers, composers and technically proficient players. Holding true to the spirit of the "classics", they play with passion and spontaneity that keeps the old music fresh and makes the new music sound timeless. This CD is wonderfully fun for active, detailed listening or pleasant to have on as background music. A true gem. Freudmann and Herschler are both song-writers and performers with impressive solo careers. Their collaboration as BROQUE offers an opportunity to hear the nuance and subtlety of their acoustic playing and sensitivity as chamber musicians.
