When somebody visits your website, you have about 3 seconds to grab their attention or they're gone, and in all likelihood, they'll never return again. You need something that instantly grabs their attention. In the wild west days of the internet, this was easy to do using popups. But according to a recent study, at least 86 of the visitors to your website have at least one pop-up blocker installed. Even those new sticky note style popups have lost their effectiveness.
