The BoneSlippers burst the bubble of normalcy and boredom like a depth charge on Easter Sunday, slipping a BONE of contention into the Clone-Zone! ... and when it's all over and the man asks the spent huddled masses, "Can ya here me now?" they can merely mutter... wha? huh? They've existed in many other forms (bands), but finally ("the Truth comes Haunting"), found their niche - like a simmering mixture of Gunpowder, Incense, far-away eyed NightTrippers - in this American hard rock 3-some. Their melodic phrases and overtones just come together natural in patterns of rhythmic durations of rhyme: yet displaying unique timbres; the back BONE of the band. When they just jam a song can be heard trying to break out. Their fun live set features projection colored bubble oil screen, Psycho-Acid paisley black light fog-aDelic stuff. The BoneSlippers music (even if they do a cover ta freak to}, seems to roll an audience over coax them to release their "Beast Within". I like the way they work it, uh huh.. {Not to say that they're into witches, black magic, or your Satanic Majesties request - but - they WILL - "Stir the kettle of your Master's brew.
