Details: The music and performances of dodging August can be described as that package of raw energy and emotion that forces you to move. They simply are able to command your attention with their up-beat rhythms, the pop-power rock sound, and then lacing it all with thought provoking lyrics. Many claim that dodging August has a similar feel to national bands such as 'Jimmy Eat World', 'Saves the Day', and 'Fall Out Boy.' Vocalist and guitar player, Andrew Gides, points out, "Lyrics I write tell stories of real life events that in some way have moved us. We just put them into songs. So, it's real." The inimitable emotional product of dodging August is further created and polished into maturity, never sacrificing the pure adolescence of rock and roll music. dodging August will always make sure to capture their crowd and then leave them wanting more. On stage, the band just unleashes their energy, and it will remain until the last cymbal crash. Whether you are up front or in the back of the room, you can see and feel their energy charging from the stage. Without question, dodging August's talent is revealed in their own alternative-pop-punk-rock style of music. Their talent, experience and skill undoubtedly give the music its edge; but the excitement is the essential element that makes this band the experience you just don't want to miss.
