A blend of melodic guitar-driven power pop and modern alternative rock 10 MP3 Songs POP: Power Pop, ROCK: Modern Rock Details: "Show me something new, I've got 1,000 other records to play." This sentiment captures the core of down holly's latest release: Something new and satisfying to drag a listener into the CD from the first note -- and keep them there. Entitled "Next Perfect Thing," the new CD is a radical hi-fi departure from the band's lo-fi beginnings. What started as an acoustic project matured into the music that helped define the DC-Metro power pop/rock scene. Along the way, acoustic guitars gave way to electric ones, and the simplicity of an unplugged duo was updated with the sonic textures of a full-on rock outfit. The sound: a balance of power pop and melodic alternative rock. The album frames the band's distinctive lyrics with an amalgam of musical inputs. The method: Take plenty of big guitars to satisfy modern rock fans; bind them to melodic, convincingly-delivered vocals; add a measured yet flexible rhythm corps; and filter it through catchy and clever songwriting. The result: a modern pop rock classic. The facetiously titled "Next Perfect Thing" is not short on highlights, including two multi-week top 10 downloads from WashingtonPost.com, "Someday Maybe" and "Bright Eyes" (the latter a Washington Post Editor's Pick). The CD also showcases the roots rock gallop "Lions", the indie textured "Curious", the Minneapolis post-punk inspired "Kindergarten", and the uber-pop rock title track. While individually diverse, the ten songs on "Next Perfect Thing" collectively form a convincing, cohesive, and magnetic effort. In its 2.5 year run, down holly were a staple on the DC rock scene, meeting with strong reviews from critics, music fans, and bands with which they shared a stage. "Catchy, familiar, yet completely original" became the buzz phrase for down holly, and for good reason: Big guitars and wide-open choruses; chops, hooks, and vocal ingenuity; plus aurally inspiring rhythm and bass. It's all here: down holly's "Next Perfect Thing." down holly are: WILL ROBERTS - lead vocals, guitar JOHN CUNNINGHAM -
