Instrumental music that has an eclectic mix of sophisticated pop with classic rock. 9 MP3 Songs ROCK: 70's Rock, EASY LISTENING: Mature Details: Dreamvision was formed in 1996 after guitarist Conrad Taylor and keyboardist Tony Tallarico met on a gig in New York. Wanting to stretch their musical abilities, they began writing and recording pop instrumentals for fun. When one of their tunes was picked up by a film and TV production house, they decided to seriously devote more time to Dreamvision. Conrad has been playing professionally since 1978 when he recorded two albums, Urban Desire and And I Mean It, Co-writing 3 songs and touring with Genya Ravan. Both albums are now available on C.D.-go to genyaravanfor links to purchase. He was a Quarter Finalist in the American Song Festival for an original song that he wrote. In 1980 he toured with Carolyn Mas and in 1981 recorded Siren with Ronnie Spector (produced by Genya. In 1984 he wrote and recorded Convict, a heavy metal album, for a Canadian production house. In 1985 two of Conrads songs were used in the movie No Big Deal. He also collaborates and performs on TV and radio spots for local Long Island, N.Y. clients, The Spare Rib and P.C. Richards. He has played for royalty, the Duke of Edinburgh, backed up singers Kathie Lee Gifford, Julie Budd, Clint Holmes, Rex Smith, and jammed with Paul Rodgers of Bad Co, Elliott Randall [Steely Dan], and Steve Earle [on tour with Genya Ravan]. He has also worked with musicians such as Charlie Giodano [Pat Benatar], Tommy Price [Billy Idol] and Tony Garnier [Bob Dylan]. Conrad is currently working on an original Christmas CD for 2004 and currently works in the Denice Given Band. Tony has been playing piano and keyboards professionally since 1981. After 15 years of playing rock and roll throughout the Northeast, working with members of Blue Oyster Cult and Meatloafs touring band, he began writing childrens music. In 1996 his Look and Sing book and cassette series featuring the songs Do You See What I See? and Where Can It Be? was released by Modern Publishing, NY. Tony writes and creates childrens activity/ puzzle and question and answer books. He currently is working with Peter Noone,former lead singer of Herman's Hermits. Dreamvision's music encompasses several genres, sophisticated yet melodic and expressive. We know you will enjoy our music.
