I couldn't agree more," says E'morey. "It's where I turn when times are crazy and I need peace. When I want to let go and fantasize I turn to music. As a singer and songwriter it's not only how I escape but also what gives me focus and joy in life." When you listen to E'morey's self titled debut album you get a balance of who he is. It's a sweet mix of pop, hip hop, blues, Techno, jazz and r&b, made by someone who loves all of it and will bring many new ideas of his own to the flow. Originally from Boston, E'morey grew up in various foster homes in South Central Los Angeles listening to Funkadelic, ZZ hill, the Beatles and Donna Summer. He went from listener to Artist after going to his first Baptist church at 5, he immediately found himself being the center of attention at many events, which led to high school talent shows and show choir awards. Today E'morey makes New York his home. North Hollywood's annual Star Scene was E'morey's first taste of Stardom. He captivated the Audience with his rendition of Lee Greenwood's "Wind beneath my wings" and won first place which led to guest spots on the Susan Powter show, The Underground, Marilu Henner show, Mama I want to sing and African American Spirituals to name a few.
