When Skidmore suddenly vanished in 2003, it was reported that her alter ego, Bob Loblaw wasnt just an act. She was in Bangkok getting a sex change. But the truth that took the former Hour magazine Arts Editor and Skidsofrenic columnist, Montreal Gazette book writer, and Kiss My Cabaret hellboy to Southeast Asia was far more wrought. She accidentally fell in love. There, in the last bastion of non-tourist North Bali beach, next to the Mosque, behind the Hindu Monkey Temple, on a mosquito-fevered no-gods land, Skidmore put her words to play to create an East meets West CD, A Shrinking Violent. Driven by textured narratives woven with field recordings, classical music, and original music by Jackie Gallant, A Shrinking Violent tracks a motley cast following an incident with a haunting, insatiable entity and piece of unripe fruit. Canadian socialized medicine, Islam and the American cowboy, the vengeful spirits of Bali Hinduism, lust, longing, and the inconvenience of love take centre stage with the modern madwoman. Awoken from a dream, Evelyns nightmare begins. A Shrinking Violent stars Alexis OHara, as Evelyn Pierce Stephen Lawson, as Allister, Nurse Bruce, Jonah Aaron Pollard, as Onan the Barbarian, Benjamin Dover Jon Anderson, as newsman Stew Roganoff Serena the pig, as herself and Bob Loblaw as the talking sphincter Narrated by Skidmore This project was made possible by OBORO new media artist assistance, and the Canada Council for the Arts a Pay Per Verse production A Shrinking Violent was produced with 100 recycled paper and plastic
