The band returned to legendary Detroit producer Jim Diamond (Van Bondies, Electric 6) to record five of the tracks and worked with Boston's own Paul Santo (Aerosmith, Ringo Starr) on the sixth. The results are a wonderful and fitting end to an era in which the band flourished as part of the new garage rock movement. "Heroes And Villains" with the inclusion of "How Can You Break A Heart" takes the band into new territory. Therefore this may be the end, but it's also the beginning.
