Details: Toward the end of June 2007, we rented ourselves a small friesland farmhouse near Surhuisterveen, Friesland, Holland. We crammed two cheap japanese cars chock full of guitars, amps and studio gear and me and recording engineer Maarten Besseling (The Green Motel) drove into the sticks; this place is so rural and quiet; you'd feel rude farting outside. We completely rearranged the main living area into one big recording studio and started jamming. My buddy the awesome guitarman Marty (Jellybooty / Matelo Duo / Stiff) joined us shortly and it started raining. And it never stopped, really. It was like living in an aquarium. Old farmhouses have strange beds: cupboard beds; small beds in big cupboards. I tried one, and never looked back. The mosquitoes were of a super breed; a week of bloodletting felt quite refreshing. We had already attempted to record some of my country fever prior to the "In A Cabin With" project, but we re-recorded one, and I wrote the rest of them on the spot. We got up, showered (individually!), made coffee, started jamming, found a riff, found a complementary riff, then Marty fooled around with 12-string, harmonica, slide guitar and other fancy stuff while I wrote lyrics, and then we started recording; one song a day! We only went shopping once or twice, so we were in this timeless "pod" which enabled us to focus on the music. I am very proud of the result, I think I wrote a couple of kickass country songs; hey, country music CAN be good AND fun. I hope my hero and inspiration Eddie Spaghetti (The Supersuckers) will approve of us freaky deaky dutch boys shamelessly writing a chapter of dutch country music history. I hope you enjoy the recordings, and you can look forward to more to come! Hoot, hollar and stomp, ya'll come to my cd presentation now, you hear!
