Details: Not many musicians are quite so difficult to describe in just a few short lines as Colin Scallan. Since picking out his first chords at the age of fifteen, he has been very busy behind the scenes of the music world, quietly going about learning the record-making business. With roots in the streets and stages of Dublin City, he learned about performing alongside some of Irelands finest songwriters and best known artists today. Drawing influence from many eras of music, Colin set about finding his own sound. From the beat-driven uplifting to the hauntingly nostalgic, his songs were coming into the world perfectly-formed and taking on a life of their own. Always noted for his striking vocals and inventive guitar playing, he worked hard to perfect his songwriting. He soon turned to the recording studio to get the most out of his ideas. With various forays into the world of independent labels and compilation albums, gradually his productions began to hit their mark. Colins songs began to be adapted by other artists. From chillout to classical, dancefloor to ballet dance and jazz - Colin's work translated to each easily. Internet sites such as garagebandand myspacebrought his own recordings to much wider audiences, and soon began to result in several exciting opportunities in Ireland and abroad. In 2006 and 2007 Colin had several notable successes with his music: - He reached #2 in the Irish independent download charts with his cult hit Build me a Woman. - He was invited by a US publicist to Detroit, Michigan where he was featured on The Big Story, a radio show on WJR Detroit broadcast in the US Midwest to an audience of 37 million. - Build me a Woman was named as a finalist in the prestigious USA Songwriting Competition. - He was a featured independent artist in an Irish nationwide promotion by Eircom. Right now, Colin is happy to announce the release of his first album. Entitled Songs for a Sinking World it was part-recorded in the legendary PAC3 recording studios in Detroit, Michigan, and finished off in his home studio in Ireland. The twelve songs on it range from pop to soul to groove to rock to folk to funk to edgy to quirky, and while each song stands alone as a potential favourite, together as a collection they contain the same energy and diversity in character as the artist himself.
