Live365: When did you first realize you wanted to play music? Who were your favorite Artists as a kid?

HS: I guess I really never had a "choice." I was practically reading music before I was reading Dr. Seuss. My mother is a singer/composer. She started me on the piano before I can even remember and I was performing on local television shows at around 4. I guess my favorite artist, as a kid was my mom. She still inspires me. She actually just performed her own show at Carnegie Hall. She's right up there with Carole King, Ricky Lee Jones and Annie Lennox in my book. Do you always write from your own experience? Or do you ever look to Others' lives for inspiration? HS: My family inspires me. My upbringing with 7 siblings growing up in Boggy Depot Oklahoma was quite unique. I'm also a photographer and sometimes my photographs tell a story that I wind up writing about. Diane Arbus, the New York photographer from the 70's really inspired me. I wrote a song about her and how she saw the world. ("A Little Peculiar"/Sturdy 1998). "Somewhere Lies the Moon" (Sturdy/1998) is a song about the Apollo 13 near tragedy and survival. "Better Place" (Bound/2002) is about a homeless man in Santa Monica. It's always amazing to me how we see these people everyday and never even think of who they are, where they are from, what's their story? "Taking Me Home" (Butterfly/2003) is a song about life, and how short it really is. Your site describes your writing as, "aimed directly at the deepest emotions of [your] listeners." Do you consider yourself to be an emotional person? HS: There is something in my voice that people tell me can make them cry. I guess it does have a very emotional vibe and I can't really explain it. I think my latest album, Butterfly, is really the album that is closest to my heart. I think we really did a good job at stripping the songs down to the core and the emotion of the lyric, because really it does just come down to the emotion of a song. Talk a little about your creative process. It sounds like you and Ron collaborate on a lot of things.... HS: Ron is most often the composer for our songs. He's amazing. He's won several Emmys for his compositions and sometimes I'll just hear one of them and write a lyric. We then create a structured song. It's my favorite way to write and Ron has always been my collaborator and friend. We've just finished our fourth album together. I once was riding on a train back with him from a Toronto show and he said he wanted me to hear something on his CD player. That melody just blew me away. It became the song "Autumn Rains" (Bound/2002) When did you first get online? When did you first see the potential of reaching potential listeners via the internet? HS: I remember being online in the early 90s. I had email before most of my friends had it. Only recently have I seen the potential for reaching listeners. My website hits have tripled since being on Live365. It's amazing how many people out there can make a simple 'click' and hear your songs. Since being online I've had an overwhelming request for my first album Mermaid Out of Water/1995. It's been out of print for some time, but since being on Live365 I've decided to reprint it and we are working on a December release of Mermaid. There are a lot of listeners out there who think it's still one of my best albums!
