Details: Lavoisier is on a mission to present God to the world in a way many have never heard of before. Armed with the talent to communicate through rap music, Lavoisier chooses to combine God with the very music that seeks to dethrone Him: Hip-Hop. While Lavoisier has been influenced by some of the same things (gangs, drugs, poverty) as many other rap artists, his music goes against the grain of the things Hip Hop music has been increasingly associated with over the years. One of the things Lavoisier strives to do through his music is provide a very realistic portrait of how different people see God, how God sees us, and what its like dealing with the realities of everyday life. Through openness and honesty, Lavoisier is able to connect with a wide range of audiences and makes it okay for listeners to be real with themselves. "I think hip-hop music doesn't reflect enough of the human element that's common to all people. I understand that selling drugs is a part of life and for some it may be all they know, but the human experience doesn't discriminate. Certain things are common to male and female, young and old, rich and poor, black and white. Hip hop music doesn't always make it O.K to be a human being complete with feelings, emotions and insecurities. That's not the reality though. Hopefully I can make a change for the better." -Lavoisier Along with performing at venues around the country and the founding of his own record label, AOmega Global Military, Lavoisier has been called upon to speak at Jails, schools, and detention centers, bringing an unreached generation the good news about Jesus Christ. Lavoisier has also worked as an educator, being commissioned to teach classes, hold seminars, and give lectures to groups of young people on the influences of hip-hop culture.
