Born in Japan to American parents serving overseas, Michael's musical roots originate from spending most of his life in US cities nestled along the shores of the Mississippi, including Baton Rouge, LA, Moline, IL and Minneapolis, MN. Participation in music was a natural part of the Riddle family culture and at age 11, Michael fell in love with the guitar. He began leading cover bands in junior high school, continuing through college and finally turning music into a profession, working as a club and studio musician and touring both nationally as well as internationally for the USO. Over the last twenty-years, Michael has been an active member of the Twin Cities Scene and a featured performer at major events and venues including the Mall of America and the Minnesota State Fair. Although Michael is an accomplished musician and entertainer, he is currently concentrating on his real passion - songwriting. His catchy melodies and witty, life-affirming lyrics combine to present his optimistic outlook on the everyday world, his love of family, and his mid-American values. "Great songs are timeless and will transcend any current fad," Michael points out. "If I'm able to write a few songs that really reach out and touch people, I'll feel I've been successful."
