He has taken the "listening" out of the music, and allows you to "feel" each beat and melody. Fans that listen to PsiVamp music describe the experience as "it takes me away into a place where my fantasies and dreams merge into my reality..." or "...The songs create stories that I can feel and see with clarity.." or "The heavy hard pounding beats keep me wondering what could be next?" PsiVamp's music is currently being played on Radio Nosferatu, (what was Vampire Radio) radionosferatu.net, where only after three days on the request list his song, Lilitu Espiritus reached #1 on the weekly top 40. It held this spot for a month only to be replaced by another PsiVamp song Temple Damaak. Not only is PsiVamp still holding the number one spot, he is beating out bands such as Type O Negative and Rage Against the Machine. PsiVamp was already showing musical talent at the young age of seven, playing and creating his own songs on a keyboard. In middle school he began to study the beautiful music of the violin, which has inspired the intense strings of his songs. While taking guitar instruction, he would often frustrate his instructors since he would play by ear rather than instruction, passing the other students in his music class. Graduating in 1986 he set out on various ventures to learn more about the world's cultures and religions. With the collective knowledge of research and experiences, he has blended a unique outlook on life into a sound that captivates his audience by combining illusions and fantasies into a new world of reality. While creating this world, PsiVamp's music transports the listener to a place where the reality is only restricted by the listener's imagination. On July 3rd, 2001 PsiVamp was struck by lightning and went flat line in the emergency room.

The momentary death experience influenced him in many ways. The experience has also affected him in his personal life as he has become more eccentric, hermetic, and as he would say, "... has truly awakened....".
