Are You Ready To Breakthrough The Newbie Trap And Start Making The Six Figure Income You Expected When You Started? Being a newbie sucks, doesnt it? Its never fun to know less than everyone else around you, but when knowing less means earning substantially less, then the suckiness turns into something so much worse. Growing pains are a fact of life and a rite of passage for most industries, but when your sole goal is making as much money as you can online, who wants to wait till you learn how to do things right? This is the biggest drawback to being a newbie, waiting, making mistakes and trying to correct those mistakes in an endless cycle of trying to do things right. It can be a frustratingly annoying process that never promises to improve. Ive seen hundreds of newbies who have been struggling to make a profit online for years, never rising up and leaving the title of newbie behind. Whenever I encounter someone who still considers themselves a newbie after more than a year of working, I do what I can to help them. It makes me sad to see so many people struggle month after month without ever learning what they are doing wrong and how to do things properly. Its for this exact reason that I wrote Beyond The Newbie, so that I could help people understand how to improve their ability to make money

online and move past being just a simple newbie. Learn How To Make Money No Matter How Much Experience You Have Online! You may not believe it when you look at me, but I was a newbie once too. I originally started working online because I got fired from my dead end job and I really didnt want another one. I wanted to live the Internet dream of waking up at noon and swimming in cash. I heard about it, read about it and wanted it for myself. I didnt want to continue wasting my time working for someone else when I could have been enjoying my life and working to put money into my own pocket. So I bought myself some how-to guides and I started working online as a newbie Internet marketer. I thought it would take a couple of weeks to teach myself the ropes and then Id be headed to Internet marketing stardom. Things didnt exactly work out that way. I burnt through those first couple of weeks pretty quickly and before I knew it, two months had gone by and I still hadnt learnt anything. I was still a newbie. I struggled to make money. Every penny earned was a cause for celebration and every sale seemed a struggle. Every time I signed up to be an affiliate for a new product, I was filled with a sense of hope and excitement that this new product would be the one where I finally started competing with the big boys for the big sales. Each time though, I was trampled into the dust by the people who already knew what they were doing. I was a newbie and I just couldnt compete with the major players. I knew I needed to know more, I needed to advance my status in the world and get to the next level of the Internet marketing hierarchy, but I just didnt know how. Where I once thought that Id learn by trial and error, I was starting to loose hope in that theory. Months were flying by and I wasnt learning enough to make any improvement. I wanted to start emailing successful people and asking them how they learnt, but I was too proud to be reduced to groveling for help. I was a smart guy, Id figure it out. I was sure of it. I just thought I needed more time... As the months continued to pass me by and I wasnt filling my bank account with anything other than zeros, I was getting worried. I would wake up in the middle of the night, terrifying that I was destined to live out the rest of my life as a newbie. I needed a plan, I needed to do something...but I couldnt figure out what. It wasnt soon after this that I was reading an article online that clued me in on how to change my position in life and that eventually helped me start to make the kind of money online that I knew was possible. The article I was reading was talking about firemen in New York City. The article said that new firemen get hazed so badly by the more experienced firemen that newbies would walk around pretending that they had transferred from a different precinct. The interesting thing about the article was that it talked about how most people would assume that a newbie pretending to be an experienced firefighter would never be able to pull it off. But because of the painful hazing rituals the firefighters had, the newbies learnt how to fake it well enough that their colleagues never knew. This article got me thinking. If inexperienced firefighters could pull off faking their way through the job, why couldnt I do the same thing. The rest of that day I started looking into different parts of my business and figuring out which were the areas that I could fake my way through. I identified the areas where I could fake non-newbiness and launched my next affiliate project with this new confidence in hand. Id like to say that it worked and I made fist fulls of cash, but it didnt and I didnt. But I made a little bit of progress. This little shred of progress was enough for me. I was ecstatic. I finally found something that worked and something that would help me build my business. Slowly, I leveraged this ability and this progress into better and better things. I was growing, I was learning and best of all...I was shedding my newbiness in the process. Before I knew it, I wasnt a newbie anymore, I was making a living online and I started helping other people who were once like me. Dont Be Happy Where You Are! Make Money By Reaching For The Stars! If you currently consider yourself to be a marketing newbie, then you need a change.
