Thomascows version Tamp Tramp Tramp an old Irish song that originated shortly after Cromwells annihilation of Drogheda 1649, This appeared shortly after and was well established around Dundalk by 1700. My mother who was reared by my great aunt Serhan learned it from her and so it passed on. My version I have adopted it to high light human madness in its tit- for- tat madness, from the innocence of pinching music to the more devastating path of evictions maiming and killing. This of course is not privileged to Ireland but it is world wide in its stupidity and unfeeling nature of the human species. The song travelled world wide due to Irish emigration, deportation to the colonies etc. A good patriotic example on youtube exists that was revamped to suit the American war of independence youtube.com/watch?v=AO6SmlIpTR8. In my version I have combined both the orange and green in one setting, to draw attention to our modern so called world. I have experienced the terror of modern day eviction, and its consequence upon those that suffered this damnable occurrence. I hope I get the message across. Experience.
