Buck naked alt-country-folk-rock band sing a beautiful set of troubled tunes from atop a strange mountain

12 MP3 Songs COUNTRY: Country Rock, COUNTRY: Country Folk Details: Drivin north, up a crooked highway, All my troubles fast upon my heels, I dont know just where Im goin Im just ponderin on the lonely way I feel What in the devil is wrong with the world that we must sing this lonesome song of heartache and frustration? Jeremiah Clark and the Lighter Thieves are proud to announce the release of their new CD, North, a beautiful set of troubled songs that blend and warp multiple styles and influences. Primarily an alt-country album, the songs of North betray the influences of folk, Americana, rock n roll, blues and a touch of jazz. God bless the whiskey, with which I soothe my soul, Sittin here on a fire escape, tryin to lose control, Listenin to the business end of the best band Ive ever witnessed, Six-gun strapped across my chest Lord, this quiet boy aint pressed Join the Lighter Thieves as they laugh and cry their way across the American landscape. Jeremiahs songs hearken back to the early days of singer-songwriters, when folks sang about what they knew and we all saw ourselves in their images. His wife, Sharon, plays violin with a classical background, a love for folk music and a gift for songcraft. She also lends her gorgeous voice to many of the songs, including one of her own. Paul Clark has played bass longer than hes been called Jeremiahs pa, and his experience roots this band firmly on the ground, while his harmonies and mandolin soar through the sky. Sandy Kramer plays drums with a gift for subtlety, while never losing the backbeat. Jim Finch is one of only a handful of people on this planet to play dobro with such a transcendent style and finesse. These guys know what the hell theyre doin, and theyve only just begun. Down in the holler at the end of the day I let it out, hootin an snortin an dancin around Theres no use puttin ourselves to shame No use givin it all away Just open up and let it out North is the second release from Jeremiah Clark and the Lighter Thieves. It is the result of over a years effort, care and craft put into every note. We hope you enjoy it as much as we enjoyed making it for you.
