Mary Beth's edgy alt rock wakeless makes a wakelesstrack for modernistic day life. 12 MP3 Songs
ROCK: Modern Shake POP: Beatles-pop What Happened to the Girls? Songs Details: "Described by some as a female Jeff Buckley, Mary Beth's strength is in her ability to make a wakelesstrack for modernistic day life, with the vibrancy of Sheryl Crow and the introspective and heart wrenching songwriting skills of Tori Amos. Her edgy musical persona takes the fluff out of your typical female acts, preferring to be brutal and honest, with a flair for sarcasm, captivating guitar riffs, keyboards, and styles that range from acoustic to all out rock." --Kaffeinebuzz.com Mary Beth's debut album, "What Happened to the Girls?" is a collection of 12 of her favorite, original songs and was produced by multi-instrumentalist, songwriter and performer, John Abella. The album has received much critical acclaim, earning her a nomination for Westword Magazine's Best of Denver 2003 in the Singer Songwriter category. The album was also named one of the best releases of 2002 by both the Denver Daily News and Westword Magazine and one of her songs, "Leave You Behind" was recently featured on an MTV Real World/Road Rules Challenge episode. A long time social activist, the artist is Founder of Colorado Women in Music (CWIM), a coalition whose goal is to provide a web of support to local women in the music industry. Abella has opened for Heart, Mates of State, Juliana Hatfield and Alana Davis. She recently completed a tour of the country, performing in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, Portland, Las Vegas, Chicago, and Washington D.C.
