Details: In Places with Bad Lighting (Poems and Songs) A Book Written By: Adam Trice Through the strum and refrain of his verse, Adam Trice is a adept chronicler of the irrational revealing the origins beneath the dirt on the soles of our collective consciousness. Imbued with a new American duende, the visceral authenticity within the layers of his poetry is, at once, evocative and liberating. Shadows and forms wander through each vignette. He wears the darkness well, and the laughter. Searching within and without simultaneously, the subtle biographical qualities of his work are accompanied by explorations of cosmology and waffle diners, pharmaceutical reps and dissonance, la la morte, and glimpses of a social fabric designed to confuse. ABOUT THE AUTHOR Adam Trice is a writer, lyricist, and songwriter from Baltimore, Maryland. Much of his poetic voice surfaces in his songwriting for his graveyard country rock persona, Red Sammy, a reference to a minor character in Flannery OConnors short story A Good Man is Hard to Find (1955). Trice lives in Baltimore, MD where he actively creates and performs his writing and songwriting. He received his M.F.A. in Creative Writing and Publishing Arts from the University of Baltimore.
