His music has been called: pop/rock/emo, NY indie guitar rock, Britpop-influenced/chemical rock. "Think Goo Goo Dolls meets Nine Inch Nails," says Dave Koenig of the JustUs League. "It's the blend of alternative and pop/acoustic rock that makes this dynamic guitarist/vocalist unique." Nick describes his music as "the art of the everyday, accessible yet intelligent, emotional stories, songs that make you feel think, music that takes you somewhere. I want it to draw you in hook you, then make you think stay with you. It's the kind of stuff that sneaks up on you and really grabs you. All of that in an accessible pop/rock package." Hitting his stride with his third recording, the 2000 release, "What It Is" (its title track was a Hits! Magazine Featured Pick of 2001), Nick went on to work with late producer, Mike Klein (G. Love, David Garza), to create his latest and best work, "The Metrogrande Sessions." "Metrogrande" was recently nominated for CD of the Year. Songs from "Metrogrande" are on the soundtracks to several independent films. Three songs were picked for play by the producers of the TNT series, "Witchblade." And reviews have been excellent. Now here's a compilation of the best stuff from Nick's last five recordings. It's incredible how many good unknown songs there are on this CD. Don't forget to check out Nick's website. You can find out where when Nick will be gigging, hear tracks from "What It Is," check out the video for "It's Almost Over." There's always more to hear and see.
