Details: While Seattle is not usually considered a mecca of country music, it is indeed the home of Tupelo, a relative new comer to the Seattle music scene. With a foundation built upon strong song-writing, the band's classic country rock sound is enhanced with lush harmonies, honkey-tonk piano, harmonica, and strong dose of blues rock guitar. It is this unique combination which gives the band it's signature sound. While the members of Tupelo have been together for three years, it was in 2008 that the original sound came together and began to catch fire with local audiences. Key influences would include the Eagles, Fleetwood Mac, Emmy Lou Harris, and Asleep at the Wheel. The band has recently completed it's debut CD "Leavin' Paradise" which will be released in April 2009
