The guitar, vocals and songs of Red Thunder boasts a powerful vocal style and stirring, somewhat folky songs that treat sensitive matters of spirituality with firm certainty. Joel Selvin / San Francisco Chronicle

12 MP3 Songs WORLD: Native American, ROCK: Roots Rock Details: "Can music and film still stir the spirit of dissent, still motivate us to think more deeply and care more openly? There was a time when it did and that time may be back with Robby Romero as one of its best known and respected voices. Robby and his band RED THUNDER are already superstars on America's Native American reservations or "Indian country" as its known. And, now, his music and films are erupting in mainstream America."

- Danny Schechter, Media Channel Native Children's Survival, If not now, when? If not you, who? is an essential CD/DVD collection of music, music videos, rockumentary films and public service announcement campaigns, available through Eagle Thunder Records. Through the international language of music and film, this new release supports the work of Native Children's Survival (NCS) and Robby Romero, founder of NCS and the Native Rock band Red Thunder, in their campaign to create awareness about the critical need to permanently protect our last remaining wild places and bridge the gap between Indigenous Peoples, Human Rights and the Environment. This CD/DVD collection features the original music of Robby Romero and Red Thunder, plus three critically acclaimed rockumentary's; VH-1 World Alert Special Makoce Wakan, Sundance Channel Hidden Medicine, and SABC Africa 50/50 Special America's Last Frontier. Also featured are interviews with Robby Romero on MTV Crossroads and VH1 Inside Music, as well as music videos including the never before released Red Thunder music videos Is it too late... and All the missing children. Native Children's Survival celebrates and promotes bio- and cultural-diversity, to help the public, world leaders, and nation states enhance their relationship with Mother Earth and all her children. All profits from the sale of this collection will be donated to Native Children's Survival. "Indigenous Peoples, the caretakers of the earth, live at the point of impact and are the first to experience the ruin and unnecessary desecration of land and life. Our goal at NCS is to protect Indigenous cultures and territories, safeguard the vast wealth of knowledge in our remaining wild places, and to support the wisdom keepers of the earth." - Robby Romero, President Native Children's Survival For more information visit nativechildrenssurvival.org People who are interested in should consider this download.
