This visceral survival story pits Willa against both arctic temperatures and her own self-doubt. She'll need more than snow boots and her pilot's training if she ever wants to see home again. Seventeen-year-old Willa hates the knight's helmet that she made in shop class. After brooding for a moment, she fetches a sledgehammer and smashes it. Since her brother Ray died, her mother is never around and her father ignores her. She needs to prove herself, to them, and to Ray. So when Uncle Jordy's drinking threatens to disrupt her mother's workshop tour of remote native villages, Willa jumps in his plane and flies the cold Canadian route alone to pick her up.
