Emilia is known for a voice, so big, it defies the size of her body, well crafted songs that fuse rootsy folk, jazz, and funk into a delicious mix, and an energy level that makes a solo performance seem like a big band. Nominated as "Best Local Folk Singer/songwriter and Best Female Vocalist of 2005" by the Portland Phoenix and WFNX Radio in Portland, Maine, Emilia is gaining wide recognition in the college market and tours nationally. She's the quintessential Indie musician, wearing the hat of artist, manager, agent and promoter all at once. Recently, she joined forces with the dynamic duo of Adam Frederick (upright bass) and Jon May (drums), as they join her in the latest recording, and they continue to cultivate an electrifying connection.
