In fact, there are bloggers out there, such as Darren Rowse who have built up lucrative business empires from blogging alone! However, you're probably cynical, jaded and skeptical about people who have made a fortune online through just writing down their personal experiences my a sort of online dairy. And honestly,

I'll have to agree with you because over the past year, I have met heaps of marketers who claim to know how to channel loads of blog profits to their sites when in fact, they know squat. You see, a profitable blog is more than just having adsense slapped all over the site or keywords protruding out of every sentence. There are loads of other factors to keep in mind as well...things you need to ask yourself such as the profitability of your niche, keywords to use, what sort of product do you want to sell online and heaps of other questions that need answers fast.
